Dear Dr. Stout:

I am writing on behalf of the Animal Welfare Institute (AWI) to convey our concerns about the Kentucky Department of Agriculture & Forestry's (KDAF) lack of enforcement of the state's farm animal care standards. K.R.S. § 257.196; 302 Ky. Admin Regs. 21:001-080; 21:030.

Through the submission of records requests, AWI recently surveyed 16 states that have enacted on-farm animal protection laws. Our goal was to determine whether the provisions of these laws and/or regulations are being enforced, and if so, to what degree (see enclosed report).

As you are aware, Kentucky adopted farm animal care standards, which include a ban on housing veal calves in crates, that went into effect in 2018. In preparation of our report, AWI submitted an Open Records Act request to the KDAF for records relating to the enforcement of Kentucky's farm animal care standards. Unfortunately, the state informed AWI that it had no records relating to the enforcement of these standards.

Several states with comparable animal care standards provided AWI with evidence of enforcement, including Ohio and Indiana. Both of these states provided evidence of a formal complaint process and conducting inspections and/or investigations of farms where complaints had been received. Ohio conducted 56 animal welfare investigations involving farm animals between October 2017 and November 2019, and in over half of these cases, a Notice of Violation was issued. Ohio also followed up with these farms to ensure violations were remedied. Indiana responded to 39 complaints involving farm animals between 2018 and the first half of 2017. Seven of these complaints resulted in written warnings and one complaint was referred to another agency for enforcement.

AWI would appreciate learning about any efforts Kentucky has initiated to begin enforcing these laws. We encourage Kentucky to ensure that its animal care standards are enforced and to consider taking measures similar to its peers. Thank you for your time and consideration. If you have any questions or would like to discuss, please contact me via email at dena@awionline.org or by phone at (202) 446-2146.

Sincerely,

Dena Jones, M.S.
